ACT FIRST

Scene One

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter young Bertram, Count of Rousillon, his Mother [the Countess], and Helena, [and] Lord Lafeu, all in black.

Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I, in going, madam, weep o'er my father's death anew; but I must attend his 4 majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, madam; you, sir, a father. He that so generally 8 is at all times good must of necessity hold his virtue to you, whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam, under whose practices he hath per-16 secuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a fa-20 ther,—O, that 'had!' how sad a passage 'tis!—whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for 24 lack of work. Would, for the king's sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the king's disease.

Laf. How called you the man you speak of, 28

Count. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent indeed, madam: the king very lately spoke of him admiringly and mourningly. He was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against 36 mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Count. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good that her education promises: her dispositions she inherits, which makes fair gifts 48 fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, there commendations go with pity; they are virtues and traitors too: in her

Laf. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

Count. 'Tis the best brine a maiden can sea-56 son her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek. No more of this, Helena; go to, no 60 more, lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, than to have—

Hel. I do affect a sorrow indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Count. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

Ber. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that?

Count. Be thou blest, Bertram; and succeed thy father

In manners, as in shape! thy blood and virtue

Ber. [To Helena.] The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts be servants to you! Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell, pretty lady: you must hold the credit of your father.

[Exeunt Bertram and Lafeu.]

Hel. O. were that all! I think not on my father, And these great tears grace his remembrance more 92 Than those I shed for him. What was he like? I have forgot him: my imagination Carries no favour in 't but Bertram's. I am undone: there is no living, none, 96 If Bertram be away. 'Twere all one That I should love a bright particular star And think to wed it, he is so above me: In his bright radiance and collateral light Must I be comforted, not in his sphere. Th' ambition in my love thus plagues itself: The hind that would be mated by the lion Must die for love. Enter Parolles.

One that goes with him: I love him for his sake; And yet I know him a notorious liar. 112 Think him a great way fool, solely a coward: Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him. That they take place, when virtue's steely bones Looks bleak i' th' cold wind: withal, full oft we see 116 Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Par. Save you, fair queen!

Hel. And you, monarch!

Par. No. Hel. And no. 120

Par. Are you meditating on virginity?

Hel. Ay. You have some stain of soldier in you; let me ask you a question. Man is enemy 124 to virginity; how may we barricado it against him?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he assails; and our virginity, though 128 valiant in the defence, yet is weak. Unfold to us some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none: man, setting down before you, will undermine you and blow you up.

Hel. Bless our poor virginity from underminers and blowers up! Is there no military policy, how virgins might blow up men?

Par. Virginity being blown down, man will 136 quicklier be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves made, you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to preserve virginity. Loss 140 of virginity is rational increase, and there was never virgin got till virginity was first lost. That you were made of is metal to make virgins. Virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times 144 found: by being ever kept, it is ever lost. too cold a companion: away with 't!

Hel. I will stand for 't a little, though therefore I die a virgin.

Par. There's little can be said in 't; 'tis against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity is to accuse your mothers, which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs 152 himself is a virgin: virginity murders itself, and should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offendress against nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a cheese, 156 consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it 160 not; you cannot choose but lose by 't! Out with 't! within the year it will make itself two, which is a goodly increase, and the principal itself not much the worse. Away with 't!

Hel. How might one do, sir, to lose it to her own liking?

¹⁴¹ rational: reasonable 147 stand: fight 152 infallible: unquestionable 161 Out with 't: put it to use

Par. Let me see: marry, ill, to like him that ne'er it likes. 'Tis a commodity will lose 168 the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth: off with 't, while 'tis vendible: answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but 172 unsuitable: just like the brooch and the toothpick, which wear not now. Your date is better in your pie and your porridge than in your cheek: and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one 178 of our French withered pears; it looks ill, it eats drily; marry, 'tis a withered pear; it was formerly better; marry, yet 'tis a withered pear. Will you anything with it? 180 Hel. Not my virginity yet. There shall your master have a thousand loves. A mother, and a mistress, and a friend, A phœnix, captain, and an enemy, 184 A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign, A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear, His humble ambition, proud humility, His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet, 188 His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world Of pretty, fond, adoptious christendoms, That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he-I know not what he shall. God send him well! 192 The court's a learning-place, and he is one-Par. What one, i' faith? Hel. That I wish well. 'Tis pity-Par. What's pity? 196

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in 't, Which might be felt; that we, the poorer born, Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes, Might with effects of them follow our friends, And show what we alone must think, which never Returns us thanks.

Par. Little Helen, farewell: if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

Par. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars?

Hel. The wars hath so kept you under that 212 you must needs be born under Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde, I think rather.

Par. Why think you so?

Hel. You go so much backward when you fight.

Par. That's for advantage.

Hel. So is running away, when fear proposes 220 the safety: but the composition that your valour and fear makes in you is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

Hel. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie. Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky 236 Gives us free scope; only doth backward pull Our slow designs when we ourselves are dull. What power is it which mounts my love so high, That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye? 240 The mightiest space in fortune nature brings To join like likes, and kiss like native things. Impossible be strange attempts to those That weigh their pains in sense, and do suppose 244 What hath been cannot be: who ever strove To show her merit, that did miss her love? Scene Two

[Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.]

Flourish [of] Cornets. Enter the King of France, with letters, and divers Attendants.

King. The Florentines and Senovs are by th' ears; Have fought with equal fortune, and continue A braving war.

1. Lord. So 'tis reported, sir.

King. Nav. 'tis most credible: we here receive it 4 A certainty, vouch'd from our cousin Austria, With caution that the Florentine will move us For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend Prejudicates the business, and would seem To have us make denial.

1. Lord. His love and wisdom. Approv'd so to your majesty, may plead For amplest credence.

He hath arm'd our answer. King. And Florence is denied before he comes: 12 Yet, for our gentlemen that mean to see The Tuscan service, freely have they leave To stand on either part.

Enter Bertram, Lafeu, and Parolles.

1. Lord. It is the Count Rousillon, my good lord, Young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face. Frank nature, rather curious than in haste, Hath well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral parts Mayst thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your majesty's. King. I would I had that corporal soundness now, 24 As when thy father and myself in friendship First tried our soldiership! He did look far Into the service of the time, and was Discipled of the bravest: he lasted long: 28 But on us both did haggish age steal on, And wore us out of act. It much repairs me To talk of your good father. In his youth He had the wit which I can well observe 32 To-day in our young lords; but they may jest Till their own scorn return to them unnoted Ere they can hide their levity in honour. So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness 36 Were in his pride or sharpness; if they were, His equal had awak'd them; and his honour, Clock to itself, knew the true minute when Exception bid him speak, and at this time 40 His tongue obey'd his hand: who were below him He us'd as creatures of another place. Scene Three

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter Countess, Steward, and Clown.

Count. I will now hear: what say you of this gentlewoman?

Stew. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the 4 calendar of my past endeavours; for then we wound our modesty and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them.

Count. What does this knave here? Get you gone, sirrah: the complaints I have heard of you I do not all believe: 'tis my slowness that I do not; for I know you lack not folly to commit 12 them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you, madam, I am a poor fellow.

Count. Well, sir.

Clo. No, madam, 'tis not so well that I am poor, though many of the rich are damned. But, if I may have your ladyship's good will to go to the 20 world. Isbel the woman and I will do as we may.

Count. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good will in this case.

Count. In what case?

Clo. In Isbel's case and mine own. Service is no heritage; and I think I shall never have the blessing of God till I have issue o' my body, for they say barnes are blessings.

Count. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry.

Clo. My poor body, madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh; and he must needs 32 go that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason?

Clo. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Count. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been, madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are; and, indeed, I do marry that I may repent.

Count. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out o' friends, madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Count. Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

Clo. Y'are shallow, madam, in great friends; for the knaves come to do that for me which I am aweary of. He that ears my land spares my 48 team, and gives me leave to in the crop: if I be

If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; 56 for young Charbon the puritan, and old Poysam the papist, howsome'er their hearts are severed in religion, their heads are both one; they may joul horns together like any deer i' the herd.

Count. Wilt thou ever be a foul-mouthed and calumnious knave?

Clo. A prophet I, madam; and I speak the truth the next way:

'For I the ballad will repeat,
Which men full true shall find:
Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind.'

68

Count. Get you gone, sir: I'll talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, madam, that he bid Helen come to you: of her I am to speak.

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman I would speak with her; Helen, I mean.

Clo. 'Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,

Count. What! one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, madam; which is a purifying o' the song. Would God would 88 serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tithe-woman if I were the parson. One in ten, quoth a'! An we might have a good woman born but o'er every blazing star, or at an 92 earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well: a man may draw his heart out ere a' pluck one.

Count. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you!

Clo. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done! Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a 100 big heart. I am going, forsooth: the business is for Helen to come hither.

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gentle- 104 woman entirely.

Count. Faith, I do: her father bequeathed her to me; and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much 108 love as she finds: there is more owing her than Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her 112 than I think she wished me: alone she was, and did communicate to herself her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touched not any stranger sense. Her matter was, 116 she loved your son: Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; Love no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; 120 [Dian no] queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight surprised, without rescue in the first assault or ransom afterward. This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow that e'er I 124 heard virgin exclaim in: which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal, sithence in the loss that may happen it concerns you something to know it. 128

Count. You have discharged this honestly: keep it to yourself. Many likelihoods informed me of this before, which hung so tottering in the balance that I could neither believe nor mis- 132 doubt. Pray you, leave me: stall this in your bosom; and I thank you for your honest care. I will speak with you further anon. Exit Stemard.

To say I am thy mother? What's the matter,
That this distemper'd messenger of wet,

ACT SECOND

Scene One

[Paris. A Room in the King's Palace]

Enter the King, [attended,] with divers young Lords taking leave for the Florentine war; Count Rousillon and Parolles. Flourish [of] cornets.

King. Farewell, young lords: these warlike principles

Do not throw from you: and you, my lords, farewell: Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain all,

The gift doth stretch itself as 'tis receiv'd,

And is enough for both.

1. Lord. 'Tis our hope, sir.

After well enter'd soldiers, to return And find your Grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart 8 Will not confess he owes the malady

That doth my life besiege. Farewell, young lords;

Whether I live or die, be you the sons

Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy-

Those bated that inherit but the fall Of the last monarchy—see that you come

Not to woo honour, but to wed it; when

The bravest questant shrinks, find what you seek 16 That fame may cry you loud: I say, farewell.

2. Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your majestv!

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them: They say our French lack language to deny Both Lords. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewell. [To another Lord.] Come hither to me. [They converse.]

1. Lord. [To Bertram.] O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!

Par. 'Tis not his fault, the spark.

2. Lord. O, 'tis brave wars!

Par. Most admirable: I have seen those wars.

Ber. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with 'Too young,' and 'the next year,' and 'tis too early.' 28
Par. An thy mind stand to 't, boy, steal away bravely.

Ber. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock, Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry, Till honour be bought up and no sword worn

But one to dance with! By heaven! I'll steal away.

1. Lord. There's honour in the theft.

Par. Commit it, count.

2. Lord. I am your accessary; and so farewell.

Ber. I grow to you, and our parting is a tor-36 tured body.

1. Lord. Farewell, captain.

2. Lord. Sweet Monsieur Parolles!

Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are 40 kin. Good sparks and lustrous, a word, good metals: you shall find in the regiment of the Spinii, one Captain Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek: it 44 was this very sword entrenched it: say to him, I live, and observe his reports for me.

2. Lord. We shall, noble captain.

Par. Mars dote on you for his novices! 48 [Exeunt Lords.]

What will ve do?

Ber. Stay the king.

Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrained yourself within 52 the list of too cold an adieu: be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in the cap of the time, there do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most re- 56 ceived star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed. After them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy swordmen.

Exeunt [Bertram and Parolles].

Enter Lafeu.

Laf. [Kneeling.] Pardon, my lord, for me and for my tidings.

King. I'll see thee to stand up.

Laf. Then here's a man stands that has brought his pardon.

I would you had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me mercy, And that at my bidding you could so stand up.

King. I would I had, so I had broke thy pate,

And ask'd thee mercy for 't.

Laf. Good faith, across: but, my good lord, 'tis thus; Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?

The rather will I spare my praises towards him; Knowing him is enough. On's bed of death Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one, 108 Which, as the dearest issue of his practice, And of his old experience the only darling, He bade me store up as a triple eve, Safer than mine own two, more dear. I have so; 112 And, hearing your high majesty is touch'd With that malignant cause wherein the honour Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power, I come to tender it and my appliance, 116 With all bound humbleness. Scene Two

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. Come on, sir: I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clo. I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught. I know my business is but to the 4 court.

Count. To the court! why what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt? 'But to the court!'

Clo. Truly, madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court. He that cannot make a leg, put off's cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, 12 lip, nor cap; and indeed such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court: but for me, I have an answer will serve all men.

Count. Marry, that's a bountiful answer 16 that fits all questions.

Clo. It is like a barber's chair that fits all buttocks: the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brawn-buttock, or any buttock. 20

Clo. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your French crown for your taffeta 24 punk, as Tib's rush for Tom's forefinger, as a pancake for Shrove-Tuesday, a morris for Mayday, as the nail to his hole, the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding quean to a wrangling knave, 28 as the nun's lip to the friar's mouth, nay, as the pudding to his skin.

Count. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions?

Clo. From below your duke to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

Count. It must be an answer of most monstrous size that must fit all demands.

Clo. But a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it. Here it is, and all that belongs to 't; ask me if I am a courtier; it shall do you no harm to learn.

Count. To be young again, if we could! I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. I pray you, sir, are you a courtier?

Clo. O Lord, sir! there's a simple putting off. More, more, a hundred of them.

[Paris. A Room in the King's Palace]

Enter Count, Lafeu, and Parolles.

Laf. They say miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar, things supernatural and causeless. Hence is it that we make trifles of terrors, ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.

Hel. I am a simple maid, and therein wealthiest That I protest I simply am a maid.

Please it your majesty, I have done already:

The blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me.

'We blush, that thou shouldst choose: but, be refus'd. 76 Let the white death sit on thy cheek for ever;

We'll ne'er come there again.'

King. Make choice, and see: Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me.

Do my sighs stream. Sir, will you hear my suit?

1. Lord. And grant it.

Hel. Thanks, sir; all the rest is mute.

Laf. I had rather be in this choice than 84 throw ames-ace for my life.

Hel. The honour, sir, that flames in your fair eyes,

Before I speak, too threateningly replies:

Love make your fortunes twenty times above

Her that so wishes, and her humble love!

2. Lord. No better, if you please.

Hel. My wish receive,

Which great Love grant! and so I take my leave.

Laf. Do all they deny her? An they were 92 sons of mine, I'd have them whipp'd or I would send them to the Turk to make eunuchs of.

Hel. [To third Lord.] Be not afraid that I your hand should take:

I'll never do you wrong, for your own sake:

Blessing upon your vows; and in your bed

Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!

Laf. These boys are boys of ice, they'll none have her: sure, they are bastards to the Eng- 100 lish; the French ne'er got'em.

Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too good, To make yourself a son out of my blood.

4. Lord. Fair one, I think not so.

Laf. There's one grape yet. I am sure thy father drunk wine. But if thou be'st not an ass, I am a youth of fourteen: I have known thee already.

Hel. [To Bertram.] I dare not say I take you; but I give Me and my service, ever whilst I live,

Into your guiding power. This is the man.
King. Why then, young Bertram, take her; she's	thy wife.	112
Ber. My wife, my liege! I shall beseech your hi	gh-

In such a business give me leave to use
The help of mine own eyes.
King. Know'st thou not, Bertr	am,
What she has done for me?
Ber. Yes, my good lord;	116
But never hope to know why I should marry her.
King. Thou know'st she has rais'd me from	my sickly bed.
Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me down
Must answer for your raising? I know her well:	120
She had her breeding at my father's charge.
A poor physician's daughter my wife! Disdain
Rather corrupt me ever!
King. 'Tis only title thou disdain'st in her,	the which	124
I can build up. Strange is it that our bloods,
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,
Would quite confound distinction, yet stands off
In differences so mighty. If she be	128
All that is virtuous, save what thou dislik'st,
A poor physician's daughter, thou dislik'st
Of virtue for the name; but do not so:

Where great additions swell's, and virtue none, It is a dropsied honour. Good alone-Is good, without a name: vileness is so: 136 The property by what it is should go, Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair: In these to nature she's immediate heir, And these breed honour: that is honour's scorn 140 Which challenges itself as honour's born, And is not like the sire: honours thrive When rather from our acts we them derive Than our foregoers. The mere word's a slave, 144 Debosh'd on every tomb, on every grave, A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb Where dust and damn'd oblivion is the tomb Of honour'd bones indeed. What should be said? If thou canst like this creature as a maid. I can create the rest: virtue and she Is her own dower; honour and wealth from me. Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do 't. King. Thou wrong'st thyself if thou shouldst strive to choose. Hel. That you are well restor'd, my lord, I'm glad:

Let the rest go. King. My honour's at the stake, which to defeat 156 I must produce my power. Here, take her hand, Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift, That dost in vile misprision shackle up

When I consider What great creation and what dole of honour 176 Flies where you bid it, I find that she, which late Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now The praised of the king; who, so ennobled, Is, as 'twere, born so. King. Take her by the hand. 180 And tell her she is thine: to whom I promise A counterpoise, if not to thy estate A balance more replete. I take her hand. Ber. King. > Exeunt [King, Bertram, Helena, Lords, and Attendants. Parolles and Lafeu stay behind, commenting of this wedding.

Laf. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleasure, sir? 192

Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation! My lord! my master!

Laf. Ay; is it not a language I speak?

Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master!

Laf. Are you companion to the Count Rousillon? 200

Par. To any count; to all counts; to what is man.

Laf. To what is count's man: count's master is of another style. 204

Par. You are too old, sir; let it satisfy you, you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man; to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did think thee, for two ordinaries, to be a pretty wise fellow: thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travel; it might pass; yet 212 the scarfs and the bannerets about thee did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burthen. I have now found thee; when I lose thee again, I care not; yet art 216

Laf. Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial; which if-Lord have mercy on thee for a hen! So, my good window of lattice, fare thee well: thy casement I need 224 not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand

Par. My lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Laf. Ay, with all my heart; and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I have not, my lord, deserved it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, every dram of it; and I 232 will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser-

Laf. Ev'n as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull at a smack o' the contrary. If ever 236 thou be'st bound in thy scarf and beaten, thou shalt find what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say in 240 the default, he is a man I know.

Par. My lord, you do me most insupportable vexation.

I'll beat him, by my life, if I can meet him with any convenience, an he were 252 double and double a lord. I'll have no more pity of his age than I would have of—I'll beat him, an if I could but meet him again!

[Re-]enter Lafeu.

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's married; 256 there's news for you: you have a new mistress.

Par. I most unfeignedly beseech your lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs: he is my good lord: whom I serve above is my 260 master.

Laf. Who? God?

Par. Av. sir.

Laf. The devil it is that's thy master. Why 264 dost thou garter up thy arms o' this fashion? dost make hose of thy sleeves? do other servants so? Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine honour, if I were but two 268 hours younger, I'd beat thee: methinks thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee: I think thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon thee.

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure, my lord.

Laf. Go to, sir; you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate; you are 276 a vagabond and no true traveller: you are more saucy with lords and honourable personages than the commission of your birth and virtue gives you heraldry. You are not worth another 280 word, else I'd call you knave. I leave you. Exit.

Enter Count Rousillon.

Par. Good, very good; it is so then: good, very good, let it be concealed awhile.

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever! 284

Par. What's the matter, sweet heart?

Ber. Although before the solemn priest I have sworn, I will not bed her.

Par. What, what, sweet heart?

288

Ber. O my Parolles, they have married me! I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits

The tread of a man's foot. To the wars!

Ber. There's letters from my mother: what the import is

I know not yet.

Par. Ay, that would be known. To the wars, my boy! to the wars!

He wears his honour in a box, unseen,
That hugs his kicky-wicky here at home,
Spending his manly marrow in her arms,
Which should sustain the bound and high curvet
Of Mars's fiery steed. To other regions

France is a stable; we that dwell in 't jades; Therefore, to the war!

Ber. It shall be so: I'll send her to my house,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled; write to the king
That which I durst not speak: his present gift

²⁷⁹ commission: warrans 284 forfeited: given up 301 jades: draft-horses

Shall furnish me to those Italian fields,
Where noble fellows strike. Wars is no strife
To the dark house and the detested wife.

Par. Will this capriccio hold in thee? art sure?

Ber. Go with me to my chamber and advise me.

I'll send her straight away: to-morrow

312

I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why, these balls bound; there's noise in it. 'Tis hard:

A young man married is a man that's marr'd:
Therefore away, and leave her bravely; go:
The king has done you wrong: but, hush! 'tis so.

Exit [with Bertram].

Scene Four

[Same. Another Room in the Palace]

Enter Helena and Clown.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly: is she well? Clo. She is not well; but yet she has her health; she's very merry, but yet she is not well: but thanks be given, she's very well, and 4 wants nothing i' the world; but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be very well, what does she ail that she's not very well?

Clo. Truly, she's very well indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One, that she's not in heaven, whither 12

God send her quickly! the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly!

Enter Parolles.

Par. Bless you, my fortunate lady!

Hel. I hope, sir, I have your good will to 16 have mine own good fortune.

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on; and to keep them on, have them still. O! my knave, how does my old lady?

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why, I say nothing.

Clo. Marry, you are the wiser man; for many 24 a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing. To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title; which is within a very little of nothing.

Par. Away! [Before God,] th'art a knave.

Clo. You should have said, sir, before a knave thou'rt a knave; that is, before me thou'rt a knave: this had been truth, sir.

32

Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool; I have found thee.

Clo. Did you find me in yourself, sir? or were you taught to find me? The search, sir, was 36 profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world's pleasure and the increase of laughter.

Par. A good knave, i'faith, and well fed. Madam, my lord will go away to-night; A very serious business calls on him. The great prerogative and rite of love,

Which, as your due, time claims, he does acknowledge,

But puts it off to a compell'd restraint;

Whose want, and whose delay, is strew'd with sweets, Which they distil now in the curbed time.

To make the coming hour o'erflow with joy,
And pleasure drown the brim.

Hel. What's his will else?

Par. That you will take your instant leave o' the king,

And make this haste as your own good proceeding,
Strengthen'd with what apology you think
May make it probable need.

52

Hel. What more commands he?

Par. That, having this obtain'd, you presently Attend his further pleasure.

Hel. In everything I wait upon his will.

Par. I shall report it so. Exit Parolles.

Hel. [To Clown.] I pray you come, sirrah.

Exit [followed by Clown].

Scene Five

Enter Lafeu and Bertram.

Laf. Then my dial goes not true: I took this lark for a bunting.

Ber. I do assure you, my lord, he is very 8 great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have then sinned against his experience and transgressed against his valour; and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet 12 find in my heart to repent. Here he comes; I pray you, make us friends; I will pursue the amity.

Enter Parolles.

Par. [To Bertram.] These things shall be 16 done, sir.

Laf. Pray you, sir, who's his tailor?

Par. Sir?

Laf. O! I know him well, I, sir. He, sir, 's 20 a good workman, a very good tailor.

Ber. [Aside to Parolles.] Is she gone to the king?

Par. She is.

24

Ber. Will she away to-night?

Par. As you'll have her.

Ber. I have writ my letters, casketed my treasure,
Given orders for our horses, and to-night,
28
When I should take possession of the bride,
End ere I do begin.

Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner; but one that lies three 32 thirds, and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard and thrice beaten. God save you, captain.

Par. I know not how I have deserved to run

Laf. You have made shift to run into 't. boots 40 and spurs and all, like him that leaped into the custard; and out of it you'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

Ber. It may be you have mistaken him, my 44 lord.

Laf. And shall do so ever, though I took him at's prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this 48 light nut; the soul of this man is his clothes. Trust him not in matter of heavy consequence; I have kept of them tame, and know their natures. Farewell, monsieur: I have spoken better 52 of you than you have or will to deserve at my hand; but we must do good against evil. [Exit.]

Par. An idle lord, I swear.

Ber. I think [not] so.

56

Par. Why, do you not know him?

Ber. Yes, I do know him well; and common speech Gives him a worthy pass. Here comes my clog.

Enter Helena [followed by Clown].

Hel. I have, sir, as I was commanded from you, 60 Spoke with the king, and have procur'd his leave For present parting; only, he desires Some private speech with you.

ACT THIRD

Scene One

[Florence. A Room in the Duke's Palace]

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence [and] the two Frenchmen [the Lords], with a troop of soldiers.

Duke. So that from point to point now have you heard

The fundamental reasons of this war,

Whose great decision hath much blood let forth,

And more thirsts after.

1. Lord. Holy seems the quarrel Upon your Grace's part; black and fearful On the opposer.

3 decision: act of deciding

98 coragio: courage

Duke. Therefore we marvel much our cousin France Would in so just a business shut his bosom Against our borrowing prayers. Good my lord. 1. Lord. The reasons of our state I cannot yield, But like a common and an outward man, That the great figure of a council frames 12 By self-unable motion: therefore dare not Say what I think of it, since I have found Myself in my incertain grounds to fail As often as I guess'd. Duke. Be it his pleasure. 2. Lord. But I am sure the younger of our nature, That surfeit on their ease, will day by day Come here for physic. Welcome shall they be. Duke.

And all the honours that can fly from us 20 Shall on them settle. You know your places well; When better fall, for your avails they fell. Flourish. [Exeunt.] To-morrow to the field.

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter Countess and Clown.

Clo. Why, he will look upon his boot and sing; mend the ruff and sing; ask questions and sing; pick his teeth and sing. I know a man 8 that had this trick of melancholy hold a goodly manor for a song.

Count. [Opening a letter.] Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come.

Clo. I have no mind to Isbel since I was at court. Our old lings and our Isbels o' the country are nothing like your old ling and your Isbels o' the court: the brains of my Cupid's knocked 16 out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Count. What have we here?

Clo. E'en that you have there.

[Countess reads] a Letter. 'I have sent you a daughter-in-law: she hath recovered the king, and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make the "not" eternal. Clo. O madam! vonder is heavy news within between two soldiers and my young lady.

Count. What is the matter?

Clo. Nav. there is some comfort in the news, some comfort; your son will not be killed so soon as I thought he would. 40

Count. Why should he be killed?

Clo. So say I, madam, if he run away, as I hear he does: the danger is in standing to't; that's the loss of men, though it be the getting 44 of children. Here they come will tell you more; for my part, I only hear your son was run away.

Enter Helen and two Gentlemen [the French Lords].

1. Gen. Save you, good madam.

Hel. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone. 48

2. Gen. Do not say so.

Count. Think upon patience. Pray you, gentlemen, I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief. That the first face of neither, on the start, Can woman me unto 't. Where is my son, I pray you? 2. Gen. Madam, he's gone to serve the Duke of Florence:

We met him thitherward; for thence we came. And, after some dispatch in hand at court, 56 Thither we bend again.

Hel. Look on his letter, madam; here's my passport. 'When thou canst get the ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a child 60 begotten of thy body that I am father to, then Towards Florence is he? 2. Gen. Av. madam. Count. And to be a soldier? 2. Gen. Such is his noble purpose; and, believe 't, The duke will lay upon him all the honour That good convenience claims. Count. Return you thither? 1. Gen. Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of speed. Hel. 'Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.' 'Tis bitter. Find you that there? Count. Av. madam. Hel.1. Gen. 'Tis but the boldness of his hand, haply, which his heart was not consenting to. Count. Nothing in France until he have no wife! There's nothing here that is too good for him But only she; and she deserves a lord That twenty such rude boys might tend upon, 84 And call her hourly mistress. Who was with him?

In that and all your worthiest affairs.
Count. Not so, but as we change our courtesies.	100
Will you draw near?

Hel. 'Till I have no wife, I have nothing in Fra	nce.'
Nothing in France until he has no wife!
Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France;	104
Then hast thou all again. Poor lord! is 't I

Scene Three

[Florence. Before the Duke's Palace]

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Rousillon, drum and trumpets, Soldiers, Parolles.

Duke. The general of our horse thou art; and we, Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence Upon thy promising fortune.

Sir, it is Ber. A charge too heavy for my strength, but yet We'll strive to bear it for your worthy sake

Then go thou forth, Duke.

And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm

Great Mars, I put myself into thy file:

Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove

A lover of thy drum, hater of love. Exeunt omnes.

Scene Four

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter Countess and Steward.

Count. Alas! and would you take the letter of her? Might you not know she would do as she has done, By sending me a letter? Read it again.

[Steward reads a] Letter. 'I am Saint Jaques' pilgrim, thither gone:

Ambitious love hath so in me offended

That bare-foot plod I the cold ground upon

With sainted vow my faults to have amended.

Write, write, that from the bloody course of war,

My dearest master, your dear son, may hie:

Bless him at home in peace, whilst I from far

His name with zealous fervour sanctify:

His taken labours bid him me forgive;

Count. What angel shall

Unless her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear,
And loves to grant, reprieve him from the wrath	28

To this unworthy husband of his wife.

Led hither by pure love. Which of them both

Scene Five

[Without the Walls of Florence]

A tucket afar off. Enter old Widow of Florence, her daughter [Diana], Violenta and Mariana, with other Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach the city, we shall lose all the sight.

Dia. They say the French count has done most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their greatest commander, and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. We have lost our labour; they are gone a contrary way: 8 hark! you may know by their trumpets.

Mar. Come; let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl: the honour of a maid 12 is her name, and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mar. I know that knave, hang him! one 16 Parolles: a filthy officer he is in those suggestions for the young earl. Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they 20 go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wrack of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed 24 with the twigs that threatens them. I hope I need not to advise you further; but I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known but the 28 modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Wid. I hope so.

Enter Helen [in the dress of a Pilgrim].

Look, here comes a pilgrim:

I know she will lie at my house; thither they 32 send one another. I'll question her.

God save you, pilgrim! whither are [you] bound?

Hel. To Saint Jaques le Grand.

Where do the palmers lodge, I do beseech you?

Wid. At the Saint Francis, here beside the port.

Hel. Is this the way?

Wid. Ay, marry, is 't.

A march afar. Hark you!

They come this way. If you will tarry, holy pilgrim, But till the troops come by,

I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd: The rather, for I think I know your hostess

As ample as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?

Wid. If you shall please so, pilgrim.

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came, I think, from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a countryman of yours That has done worthy service.

Dia. Whatsome'er he is,
He's bravely taken here. He stole from France, 52
As 'tis reported: for the king had married him
Against his liking. Think you it is so?
Hel. Ay, surely, mere the truth: I know his lady.
Dia. There is a gentleman that serves the count 56
Reports but coarsely of her.
Hel. What's his name?
Dia. Monsieur Parolles.
Hel. O, I believe with him.
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great count himself, she is too mean 60
To have her name repeated: all her deserving
Is a reserved honesty, and that
I have not heard examin'd.
Dia. Alas, poor lady!
'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife 64
Of a detesting lord.
Wid. I write, good creature, wheresoe'er she is,
Her heart weighs sadly. This young maid might do her
A shrewd turn if she pleas'd.

Wid. So, now they come.

That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son:

That, Escalus. Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia.

He: That with the plume: 'tis a most gallant fellow;

I would he lov'd his wife: if he were honester. He were much goodlier. Is 't not a handsome gentleman?

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'Tis pity he is not honest. Yond's that same knave

That leads him to these places: were I his lady, I would poison that vile rascal.

Which is he? Hel. 84

Dia. That jackanapes with scarfs. Why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i' the battle.

Par. Lose our drum! well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vexed at something.

Look, he has spied us.

Wid. Marry, hang you!

Mar. And your courtesy, for a ring-carrier! Exit [Bertram, with Parolles and the army].

Scene Six

[Camp before Florence]

Enter Count Rousillon and the Frenchmen [the Lords], as at first.

- 1. Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to 't: let him have his way.
- 2. Lord. If your lordship find him not a hilding, hold me no more in your respect.
 - 1. Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble.

Ber. Do you think I am so far deceived in him?

- 1. Lord. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to 8 speak of him as my kinsman, he's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertainment.
 - 2. Lord. It were fit you knew him, lest, reposing too far in his virtue, which he hath not, he might at some great and trusty business in a main danger fail you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

- 2. Lord. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently 20 undertake to do.
- 1. Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him: such I will have whom I am sure he knows not from the enemy. 24 We will bind and hoodwink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the leaguer of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents. Be but your lordship present at 28 his examination: if he do not, for the promise of his life and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that 32 with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgment in anything.
- 2. Lord. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum! he says he has a stratagem 36 for 't. When your lordship sees the bottom of his success in 't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ours will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining 40 cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Enter Parolles.

Ber. How now, monsieur! this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.

2. Lord. A pox on 't! let it go: 'tis but a drum. 48

Par. 'But a drum!' Is 't 'but a drum'? drum so lost! There was excellent command, to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own soldiers!

2. Lord. That was not to be blamed in the command of the service: it was a disaster of war that Cæsar himself could not have prevented if he had been there to command.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success: some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum: but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered.

Ber. It might; but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered. But that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drum or 64 another, or hic jacet.

Ber. Why, if you have a stomach, to 't, monsieur; if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native 68 quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise and go on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speed well in it, the duke shall both speak of it and extend to you what further 72

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his Grace you are gone about it? 84

Par. I know not what the success will be, my lord, but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know th' art valiant, and, to the possibility of thy soldiership, will subscribe for thee. 88 Farewell.

Par. I love not many words. Exit.

1. Lord. No more than a fish loves water. Is not this a strange fellow, my lord, that so con- 92 fidently seems to undertake this business, which he knows is not to be done; damns himself to do, and dares better be damned than to do 't?

2. Lord. You do not know him, my lord, as 96 we do: certain it is, that he will steal himself into a man's favour, and for a week escape a great deal of discoveries; but when you find him out you have him ever after. 100

ACT FOURTH

Scene One

[Without the Florentine Camp]

Enter one of the Frenchmen [First Lord] with five or six other Soldiers in ambush.

- 1. Lord. He can come no other way but by this hedge-corner. When you sally upon him, speak what terrible language you will: though you understand it not yourselves, no 4 matter; for we must not seem to understand him, unless some one among us, whom we must produce for an interpreter.
- 1. Sold. Good captain, let me be the in-8 terpreter.
- 1. Lord. Art not acquainted with him? knows he not thy voice?

1. Sold. No, sir, I warrant you.

1. Lord. But what linsey-woolsey hast thou to speak to us again?

1. Sold. E'en such as you speak to me.

1. Lord. He must think us some band of 16 strangers i' th' adversary's entertainment. Now, he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages; therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak one to 20 another; so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose: chough's language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very politic. But couch, ho! 24 here he comes, to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Ten o'clock: within these three hours 'twill be time enough to go home. What shall 28 I say I have done? It must be a very plausive invention that carries it. They begin to smoke me, and disgraces have of late knocked too often at my door. I find my tongue is too foolhardy; but 32 my heart hath the fear of Mars before it and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

1. Lord. [Aside.] This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of. 38

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts 40 and say I got them in exploit. Yet slight ones will not carry it: they will say, 'Came you off with so little?' and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore, what's the instance? Tongue, I must 44 put you into a butter-woman's mouth, and buy myself another of Bajazet's mule, if you prattle me into these perils.

1. Lord. Is it possible he should know 48 what he is, and be that he is?

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword. 52

1. Lord. We cannot afford you so.

Par. Or the baring of my beard, and to say it was in stratagem.

Par. Or to drown my clothes, and say I was stripped.

1. Lord. Hardly serve.

Par. Though I swore I leapt from the 60 window of the citadel—

1. Lord. How deep?

Par. Thirty fathom.

1. Lord. Three great oaths would scarce 64 make that be believed.

Par. I would I had any drum of the enemy's: I would swear I recovered it.

1. Lord. You shall hear one anon.

68

Par. A drum now of the enemy's!

Alarum within.

1. Lord. Throca movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo, cargo, cargo, cargo, villianda par corbo, cargo.

Par. O! ransom, ransom! Do not hide mine eyes. 72
Inter. Boskos thromuldo boskos.

Par. O! let me live, 88
And all the secrets of our camp I'll show,

Inter. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I do not, damn me.

Inter. Acordo linta.

Come on; thou art granted space.

Exit [with Parolles guarded].

A short alarum within.

 Lord. Go, tell the Count Rousillon and my brother We have caught the woodcock, and will keep him muffled

Till we do hear from them.

Sold. Captain, I will. 96

1. Lord. A' will betray us all unto ourselves:

Scene Two

[Florence. A Room in the Widow's House]

Enter Bertram and the maid called Diana.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontibell. Dia. No, my good lord, Diana.

Ber. Titled goddess;

And worth it, with addition! But, fair soul, In your fine frame hath love no quality?

If the quick fire of youth light not your mind,

You are no maiden, but a monument:

When you are dead, you should be such a one

As you are now, for you are cold and stern; And now you should be as your mother was

When your sweet self was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No:

My mother did but duty; such, my lord, As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more o' that!

I prithee do not strive against my vows.

I was compell'd to her; but I love thee

By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever

Do thee all rights of service.

Dia. Ay, so you serve us
Till we serve you; but when you have our roses,
You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves
And mock us with our bareness.

Ber. How have I sworn! 20

Dia. 'Tis not the many oaths that makes the truth, But the plain single vow that is vow'd true.

3 addition: a higher title of honor 11 should: would 4 quality: standing 19 barely: merely

What is not holy, that we swear not by,

I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths,
When I did love you ill? This has no holding,
To swear by him whom I protest to love,	28
That I will work against him: therefore your oaths
Are words and poor conditions, but unseal'd,
At least in my opinion.
Ber. Change it, change it.
Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy;	32
And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts
That you do charge men with. Stand no more off,
But give thyself unto my sick desires,
Who then recovers: say thou art mine, and ever	36
My love as it begins shall so persever.
Dia. I see that men make rope's in such a scarre
That we'll forsake ourselves. Give me that ring.
Ber. I'll lend it thee, my dear; but have no power	40
To give it from me.
Dia. Will you not, my lord?

Against your vain assault.
Ber. Here, take my ring:
My house, mine honour, yea, my life, be thine, 52
And I'll be bid by thee.
Dia. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber-window:
I'll order take my mother shall not hear.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth, 56
When you have conquer'd my yet maiden bed,
Remain there but an hour, nor speak to me.
My reasons are most strong, and you shall know them
When back again this ring shall be deliver'd: 60
And on your finger in the night I'll put Another ring that, what in time proceeds,
May token to the future our past deeds.
Adieu, till then; then, fail not. You have won 64
A wife of me, though there my hope be done.
Ber. A heaven on earth I have won by wooing thee. [Exit.]
Dia. For which live long to thank both heaven and

You may so in the end.
My mother told me just how he would woo
As if she sat in's heart; she says all men
Have the like oaths: he had sworn to marry me
When his wife's dead; therefore I'll lie with him 72

Scene Three

[The Florentine Camp]

Enter the two French Captains [the Lords] and some two or three Soldiers.

- 1. Lord. You have not given him his mother's letter?
- 2. Lord. I have delivered it an hour since: there is something in't that stings his nature, 4 for on the reading it he changed almost into another man.
- 1. Lord. He has much worthy blame laid upon him for shaking off so good a wife and so 8 sweet a lady.
- 2. Lord. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who had even tuned his bounty to sing happiness to him. 12 I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.
- 1. Lord. When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.
- 2. Lord. He hath perverted a young gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown; and this night he fleshes his will in the spoil of her honour: he hath given her his 20 monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.
- 1. Lord. Now, God delay our rebellion! as we are ourselves, what things are we! 24
 - 2. Lord. Merely our own traitors: and as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorred ends, so he that in this action 28 contrives against his own nobility, in his proper stream o'erflows himself.

- 1. Lord. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We 32 shall not then have his company to-night?
- 2. Lord. Not till after midnight, for he is dieted to his hour.
- 1. Lord. That approaches apace: I would 36 gladly have him see his company anatomized, that he might take a measure of his own judgments, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit.
- 2. Lord. We will not meddle with him till he come, for his presence must be the whip of the other.
- 1. Lord. In the meantime what hear you 44 of these wars?
 - 2. Lord. I hear there is an overture of peace.
- 1. Lord. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded.
- 2. Lord. What will Count Rousillon do then? will he travel higher, or return again into France?
- 1. Lord. I perceive by this demand, you 52 are not altogether of his council.
- 2. Lord. Let it be forbid, sir; so should I be a great deal of his act.
 - 1. Lord. Sir, his wife some two months 58 since fled from his house: her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jaques le Grand; which holy undertaking with most austere sanctimony she accomplished; and, there residing, the 60 tenderness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

2. Lord. How is this justified?

64

- 1. Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letters, which makes her story true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her office to say is come, was faith-68 fully confirmed by the rector of the place.
 - 2. Lord. Hath the count all this intelligence?
- 1. Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of 72 the verity.
- 2. Lord. I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this.
- 1. Lord. How mightly sometimes we remake us comforts of our losses!
- 2. Lord. And how mightily some other times we drown our gain in tears! The great dignity that his valour hath here acquired for 80 him shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.
- 1. Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would 84 be proud if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair if they were not cherished by our virtues.

Enter & Messenger.

How now! where's your master?

88

Mess. He met the duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave: his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the king. 92

2. Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

Enter Count Rousillon.

1. Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tartness. Here's his lordship now. 96 How now, my lord! is 't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to-night dispatched sixteen businesses, a month's length apiece, by an abstract of success: I have congied with the 100 duke, done my adieu with his nearest, buried a wife, mourned for her, writ to my lady mother I am returning, entertained my convoy, and between these main parcels of dispatch effected 104 many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

2. Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it re- 108 quires haste of your lordship.

Ber. I mean, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter. But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the 112 soldier? Come, bring forth this counterfeit

93 shall: would

¹⁰⁰ abstract of success: successful summary proceeding congied with: taken leave of

¹⁰¹ done . . . nearest: said farewell to his suite 103 entertained: engaged 104 main . . . dispatch: chief pieces of business

2. Lord. Bring him forth.

116 [Exeunt Soldiers.]

Has sat i' the stocks all night, poor gallant

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he 120 carry himself?

1. Lord. I have told your lordship already, the stocks carry him. But to answer you as you would be understood, he weeps like a wench 124 that had shed her milk: he hath confessed himself to Morgan—whom he supposes to be a friar—from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting i' the 128 stocks: and what think you he hath confessed?

Ber. Nothing of me, has a'?

2. Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in 't, 132 as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Enter Parolles with his Interpreter [and other Soldiers].

Ber. A plague upon him! muffled! he can say nothing of me: hush! hush!

1. Lord. Hoodman comes! Portotartarossa.

Inter. He calls for the tortures: what will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know without constraint: if ye pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more.

¹¹⁴ module: model 128 instant: present

Inter. Bosko chimurcho.

144

1. Lord. Boblibindo chicurmurco.

Inter. You are a merciful general. Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

Inter. 'First, demand of him how many horse the duke is strong.' What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak 152 and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

Inter. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do: I'll take the sacrament on 't, how and which way you will.

Ber. All's one to him. What a past-saving slave is this!

- 1. Lord. Y' are deceived, my lord: this is Monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist—that was his own phrase—that had the whole theoric of war in the knot of his scarf, and the 164 practice in the chape of his dagger.
- 2. Lord. I will never trust a man again for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have everything in him by wearing his apparel 168 neatly.

Inter. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said—I will say true—or thereabouts, set down, for I'll 172 speak truth.

1. Lord. He's very near the truth in this.

165 chape: the metal part of the sheath

Ber. But I con him no thanks for 't, in the nature he delivers it. 176

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you, say.

Inter. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, sir. A truth's a truth; the rogues are marvellous poor.

Inter. 'Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foot.' What say you to that?

Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see: 184 Spurio, a hundred and fifty; Sebastian, so many; Corambus, so many; Jaques, so many; Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratif, two hundred fifty each; mine own company, Chitopher, Vaumond, 188 Bentii, two hundred fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll: half of the which dare not shake the snow from off their 192 cassocks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

1. Lord. Nothing, but let him have thanks. Demand of him my condition, and what credit 196 I have with the duke.

Inter. Well, that's set down. 'You shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumaine be i' the camp, a Frenchman; what his reputa- 200 tion is with the duke; what his valour, honesty. and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighing sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt.' What say you 204 to this? what do you know of it?

Inter. Do you know this Captain Dumaine?

Par. I know him: a' was a botcher's 'prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for 212 getting the shrieve's fool with child; a dumb innocent, that could not say him nay.

[Dumaine lifts up his hand in anger.]

Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though I know his brains are forfeit to the next 216 tile that falls.

Inter. Well, is this captain in the Duke of Florence's camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lousy. 220 1. Lord. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

Inter. What is his reputation with the duke? 224

Par. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine, and writ to me this other day to turn him out o' the band: I think I have his letter in my pocket.

Inter. Marry, we'll search.

Par. In good sadness, I do not know: either it is there, or it is upon a file with the duke's other letters in my tent.

Inter. Here 'tis; here's a paper; shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no.

Ber. Our interpreter does it well.

1. Lord. Excellently.

Inter. 'Dian, the count's a fool, and full of gold—'
Par. That is not the duke's letter, sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Flo-240 rence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurement of one Count Rousillon, a foolish idle boy, but for all that very ruttish. I pray you, sir, put it up again.

Inter. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.

Par. My meaning in 't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid; for I knew 248 the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable both-sides rogue! 252
Inter. 'When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it:

After he scores, he never pays the score:

Half won is match well made; match, and well make it;
He ne'er pays after-debts: take it before.

256

And say a soldier, Dian, told thee this:

Men are to mell with, boys are not to kiss; For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it,

Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.

Thine, as he vow'd to thee in thine ear,

Parolles.'

260

Ber. He shall be whipped through the army with this rime in's forehead.

1. Lord. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist and the armipotent soldier.

Ber. I could endure anything before but a 268 cat, and now he's a cat to me.

Inter. I perceive, sir, by our general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case! not that I am 272 afraid to die, but that, my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature. Let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i' the stocks, or anywhere, so I may live.

Inter. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely: therefore, once more to this Captain Dumaine. You have answered to his reputation with the duke and to his valour: 280 what is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister; for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus; he professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking 284 'em he is stronger than Hercules; he will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool; drunkenness is his best virtue, for he will be swine-drunk, and in his sleep he 288 does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty: he has everything that an honest man 292 should not have; what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

1. Lord. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A 296 pox upon him for me! he's more and more a cat.

Inter. What say you to his expertness in war?

Par. Faith, sir, has led the drum before 300 the English tragedians—to belie him I will not—and more of his soldiership I know not; except, in that country, he had the honour to be the officer at a place there called Mile-end, to 304 instruct for the doubling of files. I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain

1. Lord. He hath out-villained villainy so 308 far, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him! he's a cat still.

Inter. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not to ask you if gold will corrupt 312 him to revolt.

Par. Sir, for a cardecu he will sell the feesimple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut th' entail from all remainders, and a 316 perpetual succession for it perpetually.

Inter. What's his brother, the other

Captain Dumaine?

2. Lord. Why does he ask him of me? 320
Inter. What's he?

Par. E'en a crow o' the same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil. He excels his 324 brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreat he outruns any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the cramp.

Inter. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, Count Rousillon.

Par. [Aside.] I'll no more drumming; a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve 336 well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy the count, have I run into this danger. Yet who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken?

Inter. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die. The general says, you, that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very 344 nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use: therefore you must die. Come, headsman, off with his head.

Par. O Lord, sir, let me live, or let me see my 348 death!

Inter. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends. [Unmuffling him.] So, look about you: know you any here?

Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.

2. Lord. God bless you, Captain Parolles.

1. Lord. God save you, noble captain.

2. Lord. Captain, what greeting will you 356 to my Lord Lafeu? I am for France.

1. Lord. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the Count Rousillon? an I were not a very 360 coward I'd compel it of you; but fare you well.

Exeunt [all except Parolles and Interpreter].

Inter. You are undone, captain, all but your scarf; that has a knot on 't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crushed with a plot? 364

Inter. If you could find out a country where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare ye well, sir; I am for France 368 too: we shall speak of you there.

Exit.

Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great 'Twould burst at this. Captain I'll be no more;
But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft
As captain shall: simply the thing I am
Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart,
Let him fear this; for it will come to pass
That every braggart shall be found an ass.
That every braggart shall be found an ass.

There's place and means for every man alive.
I'll after them.

Scene Five

[Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Enter Clown, old Lady [the Countess], and Lafeu.

Laf. No, no, no; your son was misled with a snipt-taffeta fellow there, whose villainous saffron would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-4 in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanced by the king than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would I had not known him; it was 8 the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman that ever nature had praise for creating. If she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her 12 a more rooted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady: we may pick a thousand sallets ere we light on such another herb.

Clo. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of the sallet, or, rather the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not herbs, you knave; they are nose-herbs.

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether dost thou profess thyself, a knave, or a fool?

Clo. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's.

Laf. Your distinction?

15 sallest: salads
18 herb of grace: rue
19 herbs: edible herbs
20 nose-herbs: scented flowers

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, and 28 do his service.

Laf. So you were a knave at his service, indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, 32 sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and fool.

Clo. At your service.

26

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who's that? a Frenchman?

40

Clo. Faith, sir, a' has an English name; but his fisnomy is more hotter in France than there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clo. The black prince, sir; alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil.

Laf. Hold thee, there's my purse. I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou 48 talkest of: serve him still.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the 52 prince of the world; let his nobility remain in's court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter: some that humble themselves may; but the 56 many will be too chill and tender, and they'll be for the flowery way that leads to the broad gate and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be aweary of 60 thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways: let my horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they 64 shall be jade's tricks, which are their own right by the law of nature. Exit.

Laf. A shrewd knave and an unhappy.

Count. So a' is. My lord that's gone made 68 himself much sport out of him: by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no pace, but runs where he will. 72

Laf. I like him well; 'tis not amiss. And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the king my 76 master to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose. His highness hath promised me to do so it; and to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord, 84 and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty: a' will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him 88 that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but I thank my God it holds yet.

Clo. O madam! yonder's my lord your son 100 with a patch of velvet on's face: whether there be a scar under it or no, the velvet knows; but 'tis a goodly patch of velvet. His left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek 104 is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour; so belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonadoed face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you: I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clo. Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats and most courteous feathers, which 112 bow the head and nod at every man.

ACT FIFTH

Scene One

[Marseilles. A Street]

Enter Helen, Widow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting, day and night, Must wear your spirits low: we cannot help it: But since you have made the days and nights as one, To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs, Be bold you do so grow in my requital As nothing can unroot you. In happy time!

Enter a gentle Astringer.

Clo. Truly, Fortune's displeasure is but sluttish if it smell so strongly as thou speakest of: I s will henceforth eat no fish of Fortune's butter-

Par. Nay, you need not to stop your nose, sir: I spake but by a metaphor.

Clo. Indeed, sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose; or against any man's metaphor. Prithee, get thee further.

Par. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.

Clo. Foh! prithee, stand away: a paper from Fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself.

Enter Lafeu.

Here is a purr of Fortune's, sir, or of Fortune's 20 cat—but not a musk-cat—that has fallen into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddied withal. Pray you, sir, use the carp as you may, for he looks like a poor, 24 decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my similes of comfort, and leave him to your lordship.

Par. My lord, I am a man whom Fortune 28

Scene Three

[The Same. A Room in the Countess's Palace]

Flourish. Enter King, old Lady [the Countess], Lafeu, the two French Lords, with Attendants.

King. We lost a jewel of her, and our esteem Was made much poorer by it: but your son, As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know Her estimation home.

Count. 'Tis past, my liege;
And I beseech your majesty to make it
Natural rebellion, done i' the blaze of youth,
When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force,
O'erbears it and burns on.

King. My honour'd lady, I have forgiven and forgotten all, Though my revenges were high bent upon him, And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say—
But first I beg my pardon—the young lord
Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady,
Offence of mighty note, but to himself
The greatest wrong of all: he lost a wife
Whose beauty did astonish the survey
Of richest eyes, whose words all ears took captive,
Whose dear perfection hearts that scorn'd to serve
Humbly call'd mistress.

King. Praising what is lost

At first I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue, Where the impression of mine eye enfixing, Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me, 48 Which warp'd the line of every other favour; Scorn'd a fair colour, or express'd it stolen; Extended or contracted all proportions To a most hideous object. Thence it came 52 That she, whom all men prais'd, and whom myself, Since I have lost, have lov'd, was in mine eye The dust that did offend it. Well excus'd: King. That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away 56 From the great compt. But love that comes too late, Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried, To the great sender turns a sour offence. Crying, 'That's good that's gone.' Our rash faults Make trivial price of serious things we have, Not knowing them until we know their grave: Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust. And every hair that's on 't, Helen, that's dead. Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this, The last that e'er I took her leave at court, I saw upon her finger.

Ber. Hers it was not. 80

King. Now, pray you, let me see it; for mine eye, While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to 't .-This ring was mine; and, when I gave it Helen, I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood 84 Necessitied to help, that by this token I would relieve her. Had you that craft to reave her Of what should stead her most?

My gracious sovereign, Ber. Howe'er it pleases you to take it so,

The ring was never hers.

Count. Son, on my life, I have seen her wear it: and she reckon'd it At her life's rate.

I am sure I saw her wear it. Laf. Ber. You are deceiv'd, my lord, she never saw it: 92 In Florence was it from a casement thrown me, Wrapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name Of her that threw it. Noble she was, and thought I stood ingag'd: but when I had subscrib'd 96 To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully I could not answer in that course of honour As she had made the overture, she ceas'd In heavy satisfaction, and would never 100

Then, if you know That you are well acquainted with yourself, Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement You got it from her. She call'd the saints to surety, 108 That she would never put it from her finger, Unless she gave it to yourself in bed, Where you have never come, or sent it us Upon her great disaster.

Ber. She never saw it. King. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine honour.

And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me Which I would fain shut out. If it should prove That thou art so inhuman-'twill not prove so-116 And yet I know not: thou didst hate her deadly,

And she is dead; which nothing, but to close Her eyes myself, could win me to believe,

More than to see this ring. Take him away.

Gent Gracious sovereign, 128 Whether I have been to blame or no, I know not: Here's a petition from a Florentine. Who hath for four or five removes come short To tender it herself. I undertook it. 132 Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech Of the poor suppliant, who by this I know Is here attending: her business looks in her With an importing visage, and she told me, 136 In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern Your highness with herself.

[King reads] a Letter. 'Upon his many protestations to marry me when his wife was dead, I 140 blush to say it, he won me. Now is the Count Rousillon a widower: his vows are forfeited to me, and my honour's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to 144 his country for justice. Grant it me, O king! in you it best lies: otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone.

Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capilet:
My suit, as I do understand, you know,

And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

Wid. I am her mother, sir, whose age and honour

Both suffer under this complaint we bring,

And both shall cease, without your remedy.

King. Come hither, count; do you know these women?

Ber. My lord, I neither can nor will deny But that I know them: do they charge me further? 168

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?

Ber. She's none of mine, my lord.

Dia. If you shall marry,

You give away this hand, and that is mine;

You give away heaven's vows, and those are mine; 172

You give away myself, which is known mine;

For I by vow am so embodied yours

Dia. Good my lord, Ask him upon his oath, if he does think

He had not my virginity.

Ber. She's impudent, my lord;

And was a common gamester to the camp.

I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her, for, indeed, he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of Furies, 264 and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things which would derive 268 me ill will to speak of: therefore I will not speak what I know.

King. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married: but thou art 272 too fine in thy evidence; therefore stand aside.

And he shall surety me. But for this lord,
Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself,

FINIS.

- I. i. 63, 64. I do affect a sorrow indeed, but I have it too. Helena means that she affects a grief for her father, but feels a real grief at the departure of Bertram. Her other cryptic utterances in this scene hint at her love for Bertram, which she conceals behind a veil of obscure and ambiguous speech.
- I. i. 67, 68. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal. 'If Bertram returned your love, your joy would overbalance your grief.'
- I. i. 70. How understand we that? Lafeu's question refers to the Countess' remark: he has just perceived that it contained some hidden meaning. Perhaps, as Coleridge suggests, Lafeu and Bertram speak at once.
- I. i. 82, 83. He cannot want the best That shall attend his love. The sense is obscure. Perhaps it is that Bertram can never lack the best service of those who, like Lafeu, follow him because they love him.
- I. i. 85, 86. The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts be servants to you! 'May your dearest wishes be fulfilled.'
- I. i. 92, 93. And these great tears grace his remembrance more Than those I shed for him. The tears she now sheds for Bertram are, to those who mistake their cause, a greater tribute to her father than those she shed at his death.
- I. i. 100, 101. In his bright radiance and collateral light Must I be comforted, not in his sphere. An allusion to the Ptolemaic system of astronomy, according to which there were eight concentric spheres surrounding the earth. Each star or planet was limited to one of these spheres, but its light penetrated the others.
 - I. i. 116. Looks. The third person plural present indicative of Shakespearean verbs not infrequently end in s: cf. II. iii. 127, III. iv. 15, III. v. 25.

I. i. 120, 121. No. And no. Parolles disclaims any right to the title of monarch, and Helena in turn repudiates the name of queen.

I. i. 154, 155. should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit. It was forbidden to bury suicides in consecrated ground: they were frequently interred at a crossroads.

I. i. 158. his. The regular possessive case of 'it' in Shakespeare. 'Its' occurs but seldom.

I. i. 182-191. Helena catalogues the endearing nicknames by which Bertram will address his (supposititious) sweethearts at the French court. Under the stress of dissembling her emotion she speaks somewhat incoherently.

I. i. 214, 215. predominant, retrograde. Astrological terms. A planet is generally benign in its influence when it is predominant, and malignant when it is retrograde.

I. i. 222. a virtue of a good wing. A reference to the popular sport of falconry. The insinuation is that Parolles is apt in flight, which would be a virtue in a hawk, but which is a reproach to a soldier.

I. i. 231-233. When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast none, remember thy friends. Parolles is already affecting the cynical philosophy which he believes suitable to a courtier. The advice may be paraphrased, 'Say your prayers when you can find nothing better to do, and remember your friends only when you are too busy to serve them.'

I. i. 241, 242. The mightiest space in fortune nature brings To join like likes, and kiss like native things. 'Across the gulf of the greatest disparity in fortune, nature brings kindred spirits to join each other, and to kiss like people born to each other's societv.

I. ii. 1. Lord. The 1. Lord and 2. Lord of this scene are, in the Folio, called '1 Lo. G.' and '2 Lo. E.' The initials, as Capell suggested, are probably those of the actors who played these parts. These initials are used in all the other scenes (II. i, III. i, ii, vi, IV. i, iii) in which the two French lords appear, although the title preceding the initial is sometimes 'Lord,' sometimes 'French' and sometimes 'Cap[tain].' At the beginning of IV. i the 1. Lord is described by the Folio as '1 Lord E.,' and the error in the initial persists throughout the scene. It is clear from the dialogue in III. vi and IV. iii that it is '1 Lord G.' who undertakes and carries out the capture of Parolles.

I. ii. 33-35. but they may jest Till their own scorn return to them unnoted Ere they can hide their levity in honour. 'Your father had the same airy flights of satirical wit with the young lords of the present time, but they do not what he did, hide their unnoted levity in honour, cover petty faults with great merit.' (Johnson.)

I. ii. 36-38. So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness Were in his pride or sharpness; if they were, His equal had awak'd them. 'As was fitting in a courtier, he exhibited neither contempt in his pride, nor bitterness in his sharp strokes of wit, except when he was provoked by an equal.'

I. ii. 44, 45. Making them proud of his humility In their poor praise he humbled. 'Making them proud by his humble acceptance of their praises, which he rendered inadequate by the nobility of his actions.'

I. ii. 50, 51. So in approof lives not his epitaph As in your royal speech. 'His virtues are testified to nowhere so eloquently as in your royal speech.'

I. iii. 57, 58. young Charbon the puritan, and old Poysam the papist. The two names are probably corruptions of 'Chairbonne' and 'Poisson,' referring to the lenten diets of the two sects.

I. iii. 60. joul horns together. The standing Elizabethan jest alluding to the horns that were supposed to grow upon the forehead of a wronged husband.

I. iii. 68. cuckoo. Another stock pleasantry on the same subject, playing on the words 'cuckoo' and 'cuckold.' Cf. Love's Labour's Lost, V. ii. 902-910.

I. iii. 98-101. The puritan clergy thought the surplice savoured too much of Roman Catholicism: they preferred to wear a simple black gown. However, as the laws of the church required the use of the surplice, they wore it, but over the gown.

I. iii. 159, 160. That this distemper'd messenger of wet, The many-colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye. Henley explains this as a reference to 'that suffusion of colours which glimmers around the sight when the eyelashes are wet with tears.'

II. i. 12-14. let higher Italy—Those bated that inherit but the fall Of the last monarchy—. A much-disputed passage. The meaning may be, 'Let the Italian nobles, except those whose rank is the gift of the last revolution (and whose opinions on matters of honour are therefore of no account).'

II. i. 33. But one to dance with! Ceremonial swords were a part of court dress.

II. i. 36, 37. our parting is a tortured body. 'Parting us is as painful as dismembering a body.'

II. i. 87, 88. more Than I dare blame my weakness. 'To such a degree that I cannot attribute it entirely to credulity on my part.'

II. i. 114, 115. wherein the honour Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power. 'In the cure of which my father's gift is reputed most powerful.

II. i. 167. her. This is the reading of the Folio, and there is nothing to show that Shakespeare is not responsible for this mistake in the sex of Hesperus.

II. i. 176. nay worse—if worse—extended. This is the most satisfactory emendation of the obviously corrupt reading of the Folio: 'ne worse of worst extended.'

II. ii. 25. as Tib's rush for Tom's forefinger. Rush rings were frequently exchanged by country lovers who decided to dispense with the marriage ceremony.

II. iii. 34. facinerious. Parolles' error for 'fa-cinorous' (='infamous').

II. iii. 50. Mort du vinaigre. Literally, 'By the death of the vinegar,' i.e. 'By the Crucifixion.'

II. iii. 64. to each but one. This may mean either 'but one wife to each of you' or 'to each of you, with one exception (i.e. Bertram).'

II. iii. 84, 85. I had rather be in this choice than throw ames-ace for my life. 'Ames-ace'—two aces, the lowest throw at dice. Lafeu ironically contrasts such ill luck with the good luck of being in this choice.

II. iii. 159. misprision. A play on two meanings of the word: 'wrongful imprisonment' and 'lack of appreciation.'

II. iii. 234. Well, I shall be wiser—. Presumably Parolles intends to conclude with some such words as 'than to attack an old man,' but Lafeu purposely misunderstands him.

II. iii. 246. as I will by thee. Lafeu plays on the word 'past': the meaning is 'I will pass by thee.'

II. iii. 314. these balls bound; there's noise in it. 'The noise which these balls make when they bounce shows that they are good': i.e. 'Your words show that you have proper spirit.'

II. v. 41, 42. like him that leaped into the custard. It was a favorite amusement at city entertainments for a jester to leap into a large custard.

III. i. 12, 13. That the great figure of a council frames By self-unable motion. 'Who forms his ideas of a great council by the sole aid of his own insufficient mental powers.'

III. ii. 92, 93. The fellow has a deal of that too much, Which holds him much to have. 'The fellow has too much of that quality (persuasiveness) which stands him in such good stead.'

III. iv. 4. Saint Jaques' pilgrim. The shrine has not been identified.

III. iv. 13. his despiteful Juno. A reference to the labors of Hercules, imposed upon him by Juno.

III. v. S. d. Violenta. No speech is assigned to Violenta by the Folio. It is possible that she was a speaking character in an earlier version of the play, and that her lines were cancelled in a subsequent revision, while the presence of her name in this stage-direction was overlooked.

III. vi. 40. John Drum's entertainment. Giving a man a beating, or throwing him out of doors, was sometimes called John (or Tom) Drum's entertainment.

III. vi. 65. hic jacet. 'Here lies—': the common beginning of epitaphs. Parolles means that he would get the drum or die in the attempt.

III. vii. 3. But I shall lose the grounds I work upon. 'Unless I give up the only advantage I possess.' The only further proof of her identity which Helena can offer is the evidence of Bertram, and to disclose herself to him would be to defeat her purpose.

IV. i. 46. Bajazet's mule. Probably Parolles' error for 'Balaam's ass.' He wishes to exchange a prattling tongue for one which speaks but seldom, and then only by inspiration.

IV. ii. 25. Jove's. Quite possibly Shakespeare wrote 'God's,' which was altered to the present word in deference to the laws against blasphemy on the stage. The general meaning of the passage would then be, 'Who would believe me, if I swore by God that I would break His laws?'

IV. ii. 30. unseal'd. A bond without a seal is invalid.

IV. ii. 38. I see that men make rope's in such a scarre. This line is hopelessly corrupt.

IV. iii. 31, 32. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? 'Do we not court damnation in parading our unlawful intentions?' Most editors emend 'most' for 'meant.'

IV. iii. 255. Half won is match well made; match, and well make it. 'A bargain in which you receive half your price in advance is a good one; adopt this course.'

IV. iii. 283. Nessus. The centaur who attempted to carry off Deïaneira.

IV. iii. 314-317. The legal phrases in this speech are all taken from the form for the absolute conveyance of real property.

IV. iv. 9. Marseilles. This should be pronounced as a tri-syllabic word. The spellings of the Folio are Marcellae and Marcellus.

IV. iv. 28, 29. Let death and honesty Go with your impositions. 'Even unto death, if your commands are honest.'

IV. v. 65. jade's tricks. Used punningly: a jade is a horse, a jade's trick is a sharp practice.

IV. v. 104. two pile and a half. The quality of velvet is determined by the height of the pile or nap, under the terms 'double-pile,' 'triple-pile,' etc.

V. ii. 35, 36. Let the justices make you and Fortune friends. 'Let the justices of the peace award you a maintenance out of the funds for the poor.'

V. iii. 66. While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon. 'While shameful hate, having done its worst, is indifferent to the distress it has caused.'

V. iii. 121-123. My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall, Shall tax my fears of little vanity, Having vainly fear'd too little. 'No matter what my conclusions may be, I shall not be ashamed of having feared too much, since it is clear from what I have heard that until now I have been too unsuspecting.'

APPENDIX A

Sources of the Play

The source of the main plot of All's Well that Ends Well is the ninth novel of the third day of Boccaccio's Decameron, as translated by William Painter in The Palace of Pleasure (1566). Painter's synopsis of the story is as follows:

'Giletta a phisician's doughter of Narbon, healed the Frenche Kyng of a fistula, for reward whereof she demaunded Beltramo Counte of Rossiglione to husbande. The Counte beyng maried againste his will, for despite fled to Florence and loved an other. Giletta his wife, by pollicie founde meanes to lye with her husbande, in place of his lover, and was begotten with child of two soonnes: which knowen to her husbande, he received her againe, and afterwardes he lived in greate honor and felicitie.'

The most significant features of Boccaccio's story which Shakespeare altered are these: Giletta is rich; she is not the foster-sister of Bertram, though brought up with him; and the King of France is not present to act as deus ex machina in the final reconciliation. Boccaccio's tale is related chiefly for the sake of the plot, and so far as the character-portraits of Helena, Bertram and the King are concerned Shakespeare's debt to his original is negligible. There are no counterparts in the novel for the Countess, Lafeu, Lavache or any of the persons of the sub-plot which recounts the adventures and downfall of Parolles. For this subplot and for the character of Parolles no sources have been found, although various books have been suggested from which Shakespeare might have drawn a few minor incidents or expressions.

APPENDIX B

THE HISTORY OF THE PLAY

The early history of All's Well that Ends Well has long been the subject of controversy. In 1598 Francis Meres, in his Palladis Tamia, referred to Shakespeare as the author of a play called Love's Labour's Won. It has been almost universally assumed that this play has not been lost, but that it was re-named before publication. Five or six of Shakespeare's comedies have been identified with Love's Labour's Won by various editors, but the theory of Dr. Farmer, put forth in 1767, that the play is the one known to us as All's Well that Ends Well, has been concurred in by the majority of critics. The internal evidence, on which alone this theory rests, is fairly convincing. The older title certainly fits the plot of the play admirably. Moreover, two speeches in the fifth act seem to refer directly to that title, and in the second of these speeches there is also an unmistakable allusion to the present name of the play:

Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

V. iii. 319

All is well ended if this suit be won. . . .

V. iii. 341

If Dr. Farmer's conjecture is correct, All's Well must have been written by 1598, but many critics place its composition much earlier than this, and a few place it as late as 1606. The evidence (which is again entirely internal) is extremely confusing. The frequent rhymed passages and the letters in verse are characteristic of Shakespeare's earlier work: on the other hand, there are many speeches (e.g. that of the King, I. ii. 24-48) in the involved elliptical style of the author's later period. Perhaps the most satisfactory, and certainly the most commonly received, solution of the problem is to assume that All's Well as we have it is the revised form of an early play. This view is strengthened by the existence of some awkward breaks in the text (notably that at I. i. 181) which may be due to the imperfect joining of the older and the newer versions.

All's Well that Ends Well was first printed in the Folio of 1623, and it did not achieve a separate publication until 1734. There is no record of its having been performed in Shakespeare's lifetime or, indeed, for more than a century after his death. The play was included in a seventeenth century 'Catalogue of part of His Ma^{tes} Servants Playes as they were formerly acted at the Blackfryers & now allowed of to his Mates Servants at ye New Theatre,'2 but there is nothing to show that Killigrew ever took advantage of this license. At length, on February 24, 1740-1, the following advertisement appeared in The London Daily Post, and General Advertiser: 'For the Benefit of Mrs. Giffard. At the Late Theatre in Goodman's-Fields, Saturday, March 7, will be performed A Concert . . . N.B. Between the Two Parts of the Concert, will be reviv'd a Play, call'd All's Well That Ends Well. Written by Shakespear, and never performed since his Time. . . . the part of Helena by Mrs. Giffard, with an Epilogue adapted to that Character. . . . '

This performance seems to have been sufficiently successful to incite emulation. The play was put on ten times at Drury Lane during the season of 1741-2 with T. Cibber as Parolles and Mrs. Woffington as Helena. Covent Garden followed suit in 1746, when a performance for Cibber's benefit was arranged for April 1, but as Cibber returned to Drury Lane before that date Woodward took over his part with great success. In the next seventeen years the play was revived several times, chiefly at the instance of Woodward, who was, according to Davies, fond of the rôle of Parolles. Between 1763 and 1900 All's Well was acted only about once a decade. Among those who produced it in the nineteenth century were Samuel Phelps and Charles Fry. Most of the nineteenth century revivals made use of a bowdlerized version of the play arranged by Kemble.

¹ The 'edition' of 1714 noted by Lowndes is merely a copy of the play removed from the eight-volume edition of Rowe.

² This catalogue is reproduced on pp. 316-317 of A History of Restoration Drama by Allardyce Nicoll, who gives its date as c. Jan 12, 1668-9.

The most recent English productions of All's Well were those of the Old Vic in London and of the Memorial Theater in Stratford-on-Avon, both in 1922. The same year saw a German production at the Schauspielhaus in Graz. Dr. E. Mühlbach lists, in the Shakespeare-Jahrbuch for 1921, eight German performances in the years 1911-1920. There seems to be no record of any American performance.

APPENDIX C

THE TEXT OF THE PRESENT EDITION

The text of the present edition is based, by permission of the Oxford University Press, upon that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, which has been collated with the Folio of 1623. The following deviations have been made from Craig's text:

The stage-directions are those of the Folio: additional directions, where necessary, have been printed within square brackets.

2. A number of minor changes in punctuation, not affecting the meaning of the passages involved, have been made without comment. The spelling of a few words has been normalized: e.g. warlike has been substituted for war-like, theoric for theorick, villainy for villany and wagon for waggon.

3. The forms 'v'are' and 'th'art,' where they occur in the Folio, have been restored in place of the 'vou're' and 'thou'rt' of Craig's text. The Folio has also been followed in the use of such elisions as 'th' inaudible.'

- 4. The following changes of text have been made, in almost every instance in accord with the Folio. The readings of the present edition precede the colon: those of Craig follow it:

The best critical edition of All's Well that Ends Well is that edited by W. Osborne Brigstocke for the Arden Shakespeare (London, 1904). Valuable commentary will also be found in the edition of W. J. Rolfe (New York, 1881). For a careful study of the text of the play the Cambridge Shakespeare (Cambridge and London, 1863; second edition, 1891) is indispensable.
